Tides

The pull of the Moon on the oceans causes the tides. Most coasts see two high tides and two low tides each day.

The Sun pulls on the oceans too, but its effect on the tides is about half as strong as the pull of the Moon.

Bread

Sourdough bread needs a starter: flour and water that wild yeast has made bubbly.

A baker feeds the starter every day and keeps a little back for the next loaf.

Bees

Honey bees dance to show other bees where the flowers are. The angle of the dance points the way.

A longer dance means the flowers are further from the hive.
